Title: Open Project Lead, Mozilla Foundation

The vision of Open Leadership Training is to make openness the norm in innovation and research. Open Project Leads will play a vital role building a community of contributors on their projects.

Description

An Open Project Lead is a Mozilla community member who is running or starting an open project. Over the course of this program, they will:

- receive ongoing 1:1 project help from Mozilla staff and mentors
- have access to a community of mentors, technologists and more
- complete modules and provide feedback on the Open Leadership Training Series exploring best practices around project setup and communication, tools for collaboration, community building and events
- bring their project to Mozilla's Global Sprint 2017 (tentatively June 1-2) as practical experience mentoring and engaging community on their project

Expectations

1. Attend online Office Hours and demos together with the entire cohort going through this program
2. Meet with your personal mentor every two weeks
3. Complete weekly assignments from the Open Leadership Training Series, facilitating new contributors on your project
4. Participate in the Global Sprint (tentatively June 1-2), either remotely or at a nearby site (2 day event, be available 9–5 in your timezone)

Duration

14 weeks
March - June 2017

Time & Commitment

This program will require you to add one meeting a week (from 30-90min) to your schedule and complete assignments around your open project.

Estimated time: ~3h/week for 14 weeks + Global Sprint
